

Interfaith Power & Light

A Religious Response to Global Warming

Position: Communications Intern

Organization: Interfaith Power and Light (IPL), a national organization mobilizing a religious response to global warming, is a campaign of The Regeneration Project. IPL has affiliates in 39 states and the District of Columbia, and we work primarily through 14,000 congregations nationwide to promote energy conservation, renewable energy programs, education and outreach, and public policy advocacy. We are currently seeking a communications intern. The position is unpaid, but academic credit may be available; check with your institution of higher learning for details.

Responsibilities:

- Assist Communications Director with tasks including:
 - updating media contact lists
 - electronic filing of IPL media mentions
 - tracking state affiliates' social media feeds
 - other duties as assigned
- Support other IPL staff as needed for special projects

Qualifications:

Current degree-seeking college or graduate-level student
Good communication and organizational skills
Interest in climate change and religious stewardship of the Earth
Basic familiarity with Mac OS and social media tools
Knowledge of Blackbaud Sphere and Adobe products a plus

Location:

San Francisco's Financial District, close to BART and other transit
